roles of scholar, civil rights activist, statesman, and leader in the search for world peace and justice. This volume contains a brief chronological biography and essays analyzing the major facets of his life. Born in 1904 in Detroit and orphaned at the age of 13 in Albuquerque, he was reared in Los Angeles by his maternal grandmother, who insisted that he be taught college preparatory subjects, instead of the "practical" courses designed for black children. Subsequently his entire academic career was laced with "firsts" and honors. He was also the first black to receive the Ph.D. degree in political science from Harvard and the Nobel Peace Prize, for successfully negotiating an armistice between

Despite the broader approach they called for, both their advocates and their detractors had difficulty seeing them as anything but "black intellectuals" speaking on "black issues." A social and intellectual history of the trio, of Howard University, and of black Washington, Confronting the Veil investigates the effects of racialized thinking on Harris, Frazier, Bunche, and others who wanted to think "beyond

In this engaging study, H. William Rice illuminates the mystery that is Ralph Ellison: the author of one complex, important novel who failed to complete his second; a black intellectual who remained notably reticent on political issues during the desegregation of his native South. Rice reads both Invisible Man and the posthumously published Juneteenth as novels that focus on the political uses of language. He explores Ellison's concept of the novel, promulgated in that author's two collections of essays, as an inherently political form of art. And he carefully considers the political context that undoubtedly impacted Ellison's
